GOVERNMENT AND PUBLIC AFFAIRS PROGRAM FOR
THE U.S.A. BRANCHES OF THE AWAMI LEAGUE OF THE PEOPLE'S REPUBLIC OF BANGLADESH

-o-

OVERVIEW

The political and developmental situation in the Peoples Republic of Bangladesh is in turmoil. The government is currently in the control of the Bangladesh National Party and its affiliates while the Awami League under the leadership of Sheikh Hasina is the opposition pressing against the government's movement towards authoritarian control. The government's policies restrict democratic opposition and also encourage the active presence in country of Islamic fundamentalist elements that are sympathetic to if not formally affiliated with Al Queda and other terrorist elements.

The Awami League organizations in the United States are interested in making the political and governmental decision makers in the United States aware of this situation so that American influence can be brought to bear to blunt these potentially dangerous developments.

The firm of Alcalde & Fay (A&F) proposes a major government and public affairs program on behalf of the U.S. representatives of the Awami League to achieve this goal of U.S. recognition of the potential dangers inherent in the policies of the present Bangladesh government and the benefits of a program and policies that would be carried out by the Awami League under the direction of Sheikh Hasina.

PROPOSED PROGRAM

Achievement of this goal requires a well-coordinated and active campaign in the face of both America's obvious focus on other priorities overseas and the current national election campaign and subsequent post-election developments on the national stage. Developments in Bangladesh will not draw priority attention in the United States and a campaign to achieve attention will require intensive and continuing effort. A&F proposes to undertake such an effort through six distinct but inter-related consensus forming elements that are designed to modify public - and more pointedly public leadership - opinion and in turn to move Congressional and Administration positions towards greater understanding and acceptance of the Awami viewpoint.

The formation of public policy in Washington occurs through the interplay of issues, politics and thought leaders in these six arenas: the Executive Branch, the Congress, the Media, the Think Tanks, the Business Community and (in this case) the Bangladesh-American Community:

1. The Executive Branch: the National Security Agency in the White House, the State and Defense Departments: These government agencies are the three whose portfolios feature foreign policy though many of the other agencies (e.g. Commerce and Treasury have input). Our firm's focus will be effective advocacy communication with the key leaders in all three through Partners and staff who have served in both the military and foreign services and Presidential appointees in various elements of the government. We would provide active channels to these areas on a priority basis.

2. Congress: A major effort will be made to provide the information and materials to key Congressional leaders and staff in the field of foreign affairs that will lead to better understanding of the Bangladesh situation and better appreciation of the Awami viewpoint. This effort will be augmented by the results of advocacy in the other five areas – the Executive Branch, media, think tanks, business and the Bangladesh American Community. More balanced re-evaluations reaching Congressional members from these sources, particularly from their own constituents, can modify current perceptions and lead in turn to efforts by the legislators to influence Administration attitudes through public statements and discussions on policy with the National Security Council, the State Department and the Pentagon.

3. Media: Special attention must be paid to the media. We will seek to achieve a degree of attention for Bangladesh in spite of the media's current preoccupation with Iraq, Afghanistan and the election (and post-election developments). This will not be easily achieved but potential ties in developments in Bangladesh to the War on Terrorism that now has the attention of the media can facilitate this effort for media visibility. Journalists cover what they see and commentators base their commentary on the reports received from the field. Analysts look to the media reports as the raw material for their research and evaluation. A major comprehensive media effort must be carefully designed and then executed on a continuing basis with close coordination in Washington. The initial focus has to be on the national audio/visual and print media but should reach out also to the "regional" media, particularly the home district media that have an impact in the individual offices of influential members of Congress. We will get the media's attention if we can develop a picture of potential danger in the current developments in Bangladesh.

4. Think Tanks and Academe: The role of analysts and academics in the formation of foreign policy is a special one that needs attention and effort. Bangladesh representatives do not participate currently to any great degree in the seminars, conferences and think tank meetings that are held on a regular basis, but a limited potential exists for Bangladesh. The public affairs program we propose would include a concerted effort to place Awami spokespersons periodically in foreign affairs policy meetings which are scheduled primarily in the large population centers of New York, Washington, Chicago and the Los Angeles/San Francisco area. These events provide an opportunity not only for direct communication with opinion leaders in those areas but because these local leaders have a potential influence on the media in their regions and on their Congressional representatives, they constitute a channel of indirect communication with those latter two elements as well. Further, analysts themselves are influenced by these panels and meetings both in their oral comments and in the articles they write for foreign affairs journals. These latter represent another avenue of communication that can be utilized by encouraging the writing of well-reasoned articles by credible observers.

5. Business: A special effort should be directed at the business community with the immediate goal of seeking its understanding and support for a more balanced approach on the part of the Administration and for the longer range purpose of encouraging involvement and investment in the Bangladesh economy. Business follows its interests of course and Bangladesh with its significantly attractive labor market offers a potential for investment that should be encouraged, particularly in the encouragement of the textile industry when current quotas are abandoned. Efforts must be made to inform influential businessmen of the facts of the situation and energize them to make their business voice heard in the formation of national policy.

6. Bangladesh-American Community: Also critical to projecting the Awami viewpoint is mobilization of the Bangladesh-American Community. Areas where there is a sufficient concentration of Bangladesh-Americans to form organizations that communicate their views to their representatives in the Congress can have a significant impact on the positions taken by legislators. There are too many examples of the effectiveness of ethnic American efforts to doubt the value of this aspect of the program. The Bangladesh-American community needs special attention to achieve maximum impact.

A&F CAPABILITIES

Alcalde & Fay is extremely well qualified to conduct a program of this nature. We are a medium sized firm with sixty partners and professional staff and we have a thirty year proven record of effectiveness in government and public affairs serving a broad range of clients both in the United States and in foreign countries. Over the years we have fulfilled major assignments in all of the areas which comprise the basic elements of the proposed program and we have represented either the governments or private sector clients in such countries as Korea, Taiwan, Oman, Argentina, Japan, Lebanon, Armenia, Great Britain and the Netherlands. In a testament to client satisfaction, we continue to represent the first three clients who retained the firm in 1973.

The partners and associates of Alcalde and Fay have been carefully selected over the years to complement each other's background, knowledge, and areas of expertise. Among them are two former members of Congress, three holders of Presidential appointments and a number of senior Capitol Hill staff members. Others on our staff come from the Executive Branch and the fields of journalism, business and the legal profession.

As a bipartisan firm, Alcalde & Fay's partners and associates have been drawn from both major political parties and have close working relations with key legislators and staff on both sides of the aisle in Congress. These include the Congressional leadership, key committee Chairmen and Ranking Members, as well as political appointees and senior career professionals in the Executive Branch. The Partners in our firm with Congressional experience served with many of the legislators who now are leaders of their parties and provide the direction and tone for the policy positions taken by their colleagues.

In the area of media relations and foreign policy institutions, our partners include former foreign service officers and journalists who have specialized in work with foreign affairs correspondents for years and have a wide range of contacts and experience in conducting public affairs programs of this nature. We have worked closely with senior editors and reporters of both the national media, print and audio/visual, and the major regional media across the country.

In the business area, we have represented major corporations directly, managed a number of coalitions with substantial business membership and maintain continuing contact with many Washington corporate offices. In addition to contacts with the Secretary of Commerce and his staff, we have working relations with senior officials in those divisions in the Department of Commerce that have the task of promoting American business abroad.

A&F CLIENT TEAM

Alcalde & Fay uses a "team" approach for a campaign of this nature. Ideally, this team serves as an extension of the client's own staff. In this case, the firm proposes to establish a team of senior partners and experienced associates who have been involved in client activities in the various fields constituting the basic elements of this program. In this case, our senior partners on the "team" would be:

Former Congressmen Louis "Skip" Bafalis who represented a Florida district for ten years in the seventies and eighties and has a wide circle of contacts in both Houses of Congress and the Administration. He has excellent contacts on the House International Relations Committee and the Appropriations Committee which is particularly important in foreign affairs. He would be responsible for the program's government affairs portion and the Congressional relations aspects.

Former Vice President of Time Inc. Barry Zorthian, who has had a lengthy career in journalism, the foreign service and media relations both in this country and in many other parts of the world. It should be noted that he served in India for three years as a foreign service officer and is very familiar with the South Asia area and the personnel in the State Department who specialize in that area. As an experienced government spokesman, as a Washington media consultant and as both a practicing journalist and the President of a broadcasting company, he has developed extensive contacts in the media and is an active participant in the foreign policy organizations with which we propose to work. He would be responsible for the program's public affairs. He will also bring to bear close contacts with members of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

The President of A&F's subsidiary Public Relations firm, Captoline Communications, Ms. Jennefer Hirshberg, who also serves as a Partner in the firm, will be an active participant in the media and public relations portions of the program. Ms. Hirshberg is a former Press Secretary to Mrs. Nancy Reagan and a former Assistant Director of the Office of Management and Budget in the White House.

Two other firm Partners who will be involved actively are Mr. Rodney Coleman, a former Assistant Secretary of the Air Force and a personal friend of the present Secretary of State, Colin Powell, and Mr. Michael Brown, a active member of the firm's outreach program to the Middle East and Africa and a person with close contacts in the Democratic Party.

Working closely with these senior partners would be other designated partners and associates who would support their activities and also add the dimension of grass roots campaigning through work with the Bangladesh American community.

The A&F team would have available and would make use of the full talents and resources of the firm in the program as required and of specialists in South Asian affairs as consultants to the firm on an as-needed basis.

The members of this team, particularly the senior partners, would serve as liaison to and work closely with designated Awami representatives in carrying out the program. In this context, it is worth noting that A&F does not follow the practice of many large government affairs firms which delegate responsibility for implementation of a campaign of this nature to more junior staff once a contract is signed. The senior partners in our firm, and in this case, those named in this presentation, backed up by senior colleagues, will be involved personally and provide active direction to carrying out the agreed upon program.

Biographic information and additional detail on the background and capabilities of the firm and its staff are contained in the accompanying brochure.

AWAMI LEAGUE PARTICIPATION

A campaign of this nature cannot be conducted, certainly not successfully, without complete commitment and close coordination by the principals involved, in this case certainly representatives of the Awami League in the U.S.A. Agreement must be reached on basic concepts and elements of the campaign and political policy guidance must be provided on a continuing basis. Then, very close coordination and full and prompt responsiveness by both the firm and the client are essential to achieving the established goals.

In this situation, the coordination and close cooperative work is particularly important because of the negative atmosphere in which we start. There is no substitute for the direct and appropriate participation of the principal in many aspects of this program and without this type of participation by Awami representatives, the campaign will not achieve the desired results. We would expect the Awami League to designate specific liaison officers who would provide the policy guidance for the effort. We commit ourselves to working hand-in-glove with these designated representatives and, through them, with designated elements of the party.

SUMMARY

The firm of Alcalde & Fay proposes a six-tiered government and public affairs program in the United States on behalf of the Awami League of Bangladesh with the goal of achieving a better balance from the Awami point of view in U.S. public opinion and national policy about the situation in the Bangladesh. The campaign will consist of major efforts and programs to develop greater understanding of Awami actions and policies in the Administration and Congress, the media and foreign policy and academic institutions and a more active advocacy of the Awami viewpoint by the Awami American community.
